Questionnaire Section: Prescription Medications (PUPREMED)

First Published: April 1998

Last Revised: June 2009

Component Description	The Prescription Medication subsection provides personal interview data on use of prescription medications during a one-month period prior to the survey date.
Eligible Sample	All survey participants aged 2 months and older are eligible for the prescription medication questions.
Interview Setting and Mode of Administration	A trained survey interviewer administered the survey participant questionnaire.
Quality Assurance &amp; Quality Control	Before the introduction of the computer-assisted personal interview (CAPI), the household questionnaire data were reviewed manually by field editors and interviewers. CAPI (1992-1994 only) questionnaires featured built-in edits to prevent entering inconsistencies and out-of-range responses. The multi-level data collection and quality control systems are discussed in detail in the Plan and Operation of the Third National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey, 1988-1994 (NCHS, 1994; U.S. DHHS, 1996).
Data Processing and Editing	During the household interview respondents were asked a series of questions about prescription medicines used during in the past month. A proxy, usually a child's parent or guardian, provided this information for children 2 months to 16 years of age. If respondents or proxy respondents reported taking a prescription medicine, they were asked the number of prescription medicines they took. For each medication reported, the interviewer asked to see the medication container in order to record the name of the product. If the container was not available, the interviewer probed for this information. Respondents or proxies were also asked to describe the health problem for which they took the medicine, and how long they had been taking the medicine. Analysts should be aware, however, that there were respondents or proxies who reported taking prescription medicines, but did not answer some or all of the remaining questions about the prescription medicines. In other cases respondents or proxies reported a health problem and/or duration they took a medication, but did not know the name of the medication or NCHS staff could not identify the name. In both cases, the missing fields are coded as either "blank but applicable" (8-fill) or "don't know" (9-fill), whichever was applicable. Some prescription medicines originally reported in the supplements, antacid, or non-prescription drug sections of the questionnaire were moved to the prescription medicine section of the questionnaire. Some prescribed vitamin and/or mineral supplements, originally reported in the prescription medicines section, could be considered both a drug or a supplement (e.g., calciferol, niacin, calcitriol, and potassium). These products were copied to the dietary supplements section.

In general, non-prescription medications that were reported in the prescription drug section of the household adult questionnaire were moved to the non-prescription medications section (the expanded non-prescription pain relief medications section to be described later), but those medications reported on the household youth questionnaire were deleted since a non-prescription medications section was not included on the youth questionnaire. However, for both the household youth and adult questionnaires if a particular medication reported in the prescription medication section of the questionnaire was available in both prescription and non-prescription strengths (e.g., ibuprofen), the staff assumed it was a prescription medication and left it in this section. On the adult questionnaire, aspirin was moved to the non-prescription medications sections unless the strength or brand name reported was only available by prescription (e.g., "Zorprin"). Also on the household adult questionnaire, prescription antacids were left in this section, but over-the-counter antacids were moved to the antacid section unless, at the time of the survey, the antacid was only available by prescription (e.g., "Zantac").

Each prescription medicine name reported in the survey was located in the Physicians' GenRx, and assigned the standard generic name and 4-digit generic code for that product. However, for five prescription medications a generic name or code did not exist. The NCHS staff created product codes for these medicines. See the notes associated with this variable in the data file layout for a detailed discussion of the prescription medication product code. A list of the standardized generic prescription medication names and their associated product codes can be found in Appendix 1.

Up to three drug class codes (i.e., primary, secondary, and tertiary) were assigned to each prescription medication that a respondent reported. These 4-digit codes came from the National Drug Code Directory prepared by the Product Information Management Branch of the Food and Drug Administration. See Appendix 2 for a listing of the drug class codes and descriptions.

Drug class codes were assigned for each medication, primarily based on the medication's action or response and, secondarily, on the health problem for which the respondent reported taking the medication. For example, all cardiovascular drugs that were beta-adrenergic blocking agents were assigned the drug class code for "Beta blockers" (512). Additional drug class codes were assigned based on the reason the respondent reported for taking the medication, for example, "Antiarrhythmics" (502) or "Antihypertensives" (506). Another example is the drug "Diazepam". The primary drug class code for "Diazepam" is sedative or hypnotic (626). If the respondent reported any of the following reasons for taking the drug, the drug class fields were also coded with these reasons: anxiety (627), muscle spasms (1373), or convulsive disorder (1374). If the reason the respondent gave did not relate to any of the actions of the drug, then only the medication-specific class code was assigned.

There are instances where the prescription medication product code and standard generic name are coded as "blank but applicable" (8-fill), but there is a valid primary drug class code. In these cases, the medication name and/or health condition that the respondent reported provided sufficient information in order to assign a drug class code.

ICD-9-CM codes were used to classify the health problem respondents gave for taking the prescription medicine. In general, the health problems were coded to the fourth digit ICD-9-CM level of specificity, but in some cases the highest level of specificity was only three digits and in other cases the level of specificity was five digits. See the notes associated with this variable in the data file layout for a detailed discussion of the ICD-9-CM codes. See Appendix 3 for a listing of the ICD-9-CM codes and descriptions.

As described earlier there were respondents who reported taking a prescription medicine but did not give a reason why they took the medicine. In these instances the ICD-9 codes are coded as "blank but applicable" (8-fill) or "don't know" (9-fill). On the other hand, there were respondents who reported a health problem but did not report the medication they were taking or NCHS staff could not identify it. In these cases the prescription medication product code, and sometimes the drug class codes, are coded as "blank but applicable" (8-fill) or "don't know" (9-fill), but there is an ICD-9 code listed.

For each prescription medicine reported, respondents were also asked how long they had been taking the medicine. See the notes associated with this variable in the data file layout for a detailed discussion of this variable. When medicines were moved from the dietary supplements section to the prescription medicine section some of the categories for duration of use did not correspond. A response of "less than one month" in the supplements section was changed to "blank but applicable" (8-fill) in prescription medicine section.

HQKX1B: Have you taken or used any prescription medicines in the past month?

This variable was the lead-in question for a series of questions on prescription medicine use, and includes prescription medicines reported in this section as well as prescription medicines moved from the supplements, antacid, or non-prescription drug sections of the questionnaire.

HQKX2B: Number of prescription medicines reported

This variable represents the total number of different prescription medicines reported by the respondent. The count includes all prescription medicines including those moved from other sections to the prescription medicines section.

HQRXCODE: Prescription medication product code

Each prescription medicine name reported in the survey was located in the Physicians' GenRx, and assigned the standard generic name and 4-digit generic code for that product. The prescription medication product code NCHS staff used for this variable is the same as the 4-digit generic code listed for each drug in this book. There were no generic names or codes for five prescription medications. These were: Insulin (7000); Kaolin, Paregoric, Pectin (7500); Hydrocodone Bitartrate (7501); Tiaprofenic Acid (7502); Diphenoxylate Hydrochloride (7503). The number in parentheses is the product code number NCHS staff assigned to these drugs. The generic name and product code were coded as "blank but applicable" (8-fill) when the name reported did not refer to a specific product (e.g., "cold tablet", "estrogen", "hormones", "antibiotic", or "water pill"), or when the name could not be identified. The name and code were coded as "don't know" (9-fill) when the respondent did not know the name of the product. A list of the standardized generic prescription medication names and their associated product codes can be found in Appendix 1.

HQKX9D: Primary drug class code

This variable contains the first of 3 possible drug class codes assigned to the prescription medication that was reported. These 4-digit codes came from the National Drug Code Directory. Drug class codes were assigned for each medication, primarily based on the medication's action or response and, secondarily, on the health problem for which the respondent reported taking the medication. This variable most likely contains the medication response. See Appendix 2 for a listing of the drug class codes and descriptions.

HQKX9E: Secondary drug class code

This variable contains the second drug class code for each prescription medication that was reported. Drug class codes were assigned for each medication, primarily based on the medication's action or response and, secondarily, on the health problem for which the respondent reported taking the medication. If this variable contains a drug class code it may be either based on the medication's action or the health problem for which the respondent reported taking the medication. See Appendix 2 for a listing of the drug class codes and descriptions.

HQKX9F: Tertiary drug class code

This variable contains the third drug class code for each prescription medication that was reported. Drug class codes were assigned for each medication, primarily based on the medication's action or response and, secondarily, on the health problem for which the respondent reported taking the medication. If this variable contains a drug class code it may be either based on the medication's action or the health problem for which the respondent reported taking the medication. See Appendix 2 for a listing of the drug class codes and descriptions.

HQKX11A: ICD-9-CM code

ICD-9-CM codes were used to classify the health problem respondents reported as the reason for taking the prescription medicine. In general, the health problems were coded to the fourth digit ICD-9-CM level of specificity. However, in some cases the highest level of specificity for the ICD-9-CM code was only three digits and in other cases the level of specificity was five digits. When no appropriate code was available in the Classification of Diseases and Injuries ICD-9-CM codes, health problems were coded using V Codes-Supplementary Classification of Factors Influencing Health Status and Contact with Health Services. Some examples of these health problems were birth control, hormone replacement, and treatment to prevent infections. See Appendix 3 for a listing of the ICD-9-CM codes and descriptions.

HQKX12S: For how long have you been taking this medicine? (days)

This variable was created from the two-part (number and unit) question K12/X12, and indicates how long the respondent reported taking each prescription medicine. All responses were recoded to days. The conversion factors used were 7 days/week, 30.4 days/month and 365 days/year.

Drug Database for Data Update:

Since the 2003-2004 survey, NCHS has used the Lexicon Plus®, a proprietary database of Cerner Multum, Inc. to assist in data editing and release. To facilitate data analysis, NCHS decided to update the NHANES III prescription medication file with the Multum Lexicon therapeutic classification system. For additional information refer to the RXQ_DRUG documentation.

In accordance with the license agreement, NCHS publications, tabulations, and software applications should cite the Multum Lexicon as the source and basis for the coding and classification of the NHANES drug data.

Variable added to this updated prescription medication file:

RXDDRGID: Generic drug code

All 4-digit prescription medication product codes (HQRXCODE) and their associated product names (Appendix 1) were linked to generic drug names from Multum's Lexicon Drug Database through exact or similar drug name matches. A unique generic drug code (RXDDRGID) associated with each generic drug name from Multum's Lexicon Drug Database was added to this updated NHANES III prescription medication file. In some cases, one 4-digit prescription medication product code may be linked to more than one Lexicon generic drug codes. These products have been reviewed and assigned appropriate Lexicon generic drug codes based on drug class codes and/or ICD-9-CM codes in the NHANES III prescription medication file. For example, a prescription medication product code 0469 ("BETAXOLOL HYDROCHLORIDE") was initially linked to a Lexicon generic drug code "d00176" ("BETAXOLOL"). However, a Lexicon generic drug code "d04038" ("BETAXOLOL OPHTHMATIC") was assigned if participants reported taking this product for glaucoma (the primary drug class code is 1566, and the ICD-9-CM code is "365.9"). In other cases, more than one 4-digit prescription medication product codes may be linked to the same Lexicon generic drug code. For example, HQRXCODE codes 1968 ("PENICILLIN G PROCAINE") and 1971 ("PENICILLIN V POTASSIUM") were linked to a generic drug code "d00116" (i.e., "PENICILLIN" in the Lexicon Drug Database). In addition, there were some drug names reported by NHANES' participants that were not found in the Lexicon Drug Database. These have been assigned unique drug codes beginning with an "a" or "h". RXDDRGID is missing for blank, blank but applicable (88888), or don't know (99999) HQRXCODE entries.

Therapeutic class codes associated with a generic drug code are found in a separate data release file, RXQ_DRUG.

Data File Structure

There are two files related to the prescription drug data. The contents of each file are described below. The files can be linked by RXDDRGID.

The prescription medication file named PUPREMED is a product level file. Therefore, participants who reported the use of multiple prescription medications will have multiple records, that is, a record for each product.

The drug information file named RXQ_DRUG contains therapeutic drug class information on all drugs reported by NHANES participants. It contains drug (up to 4) and ingredient (up to 6) therapeutic category codes for each drug. It also contains a variable that identifies if the drug is made up of a single or multiple ingredients.

Analytic Notes

This file contains the responses to the prescription medicine questions for prescription medicine users ONLY; listed as one record per prescription medicine taken. In addition to the information listed in "Adultx" and "Youthk", this file also contains the prescription medicine product codes and the Lexicon generic drug codes (added in this update). Data for both youth and adults are combined in this file. This file can be linked to "Adultx" and "Youthk" through the SEQN number; however, the rest of the variables in this file, which also appear in "Adultx" or "Youthk", have been given new variable names.

In some cases it may appear as though respondents reported the same prescription medicine more than once. That is, the same generic prescription medicine name and product code may be listed more than once. There are a number of reasons for these duplications. Respondents may have reported different brand name medicines which had the same generic name (e.g., "Adalat" vs. "Procardia"), or the medicines may have been different forms (e.g., tablet vs. patch), strengths (e.g., 20 mg vs. 30 mg), or dosages (e.g., once a day vs. twice a day) of the same product. Based on the information collected when respondents reported different brand names of the same generic product it was difficult to determine if these were duplicate listings or the individuals had taken more than one product in the month. Also, since descriptive information on the form, strength, and dosage of prescription medicines was not collected it was difficult to determine if these were reasons for the duplications. Hence, most of the duplicates have been left in the file.

During the data editing process, outlier values were examined. When there was insufficient information to conclude that values were invalid, they were left in the data set. Analysts should examine the distribution of the data and consider whether or not it is appropriate to include or exclude extreme values in a given analysis.

Please refer to the Analytic Guidelines on the NHANES website for further details on the use of sample weights and other analytic issues.
